CZECH POLICE INVADE OFFICE

Enter Social Democrat Headquarters; Reds Predict Early Victory.

By The Associated Press

PRAGUE, Feb. 24—A score of Czechoslovak security police, armed with bayonetted rifles, entered headquarters of the Social Democratic party late today.

The move of the Communist-directed police was not immediately explained. The Communists are grasping for full control of Czechoslovakia.

The Social Democratic party headquarters is on the busy Prikopy, one of Prague's main shopping streets.

About 10 riflemen remained in the offices of the National Socialist party, whose headquarters were seized and searched yesterday. Most of the party secretariat staff was back at work. The police said they were assigned as a defense guard. They said that similar guards were on duty at Communist party headquarters.

Trade unions staged a one-hour strike at noon as a token of their solidarity with the Communists.

Communist Premier Klement Gottwald predicted victory for his party within hours, or days.

Students and professors, mainly of the opposing National Socialist groups, paraded through Prague shouting anti-Communist slogans in front of the Communist party headquarters. Police directed the traffic and did not attempt to interfere. Streetcars stopped only five minutes during the strike.

Until noon, Gottwald had not appeared at President Eduard Benes' office. The president has maintained consistently he could accept nothing but a coalition government. The crisis arose Friday night when the 12 non-Communist members of the cabinet resigned. Benes however, has not accepted the resignations.

Indication of Plan

A hint of Gottwald's proposed new government was given in the makeup of the Prague "action committee," formed last night.

Maumee Conservancy Hearing Adjourned

By The Associated Press

DEFIANCE, O., Feb. 24—Judge conservancy court adjourned a hearing on proposed creation of a Maumee watershed conservancy court today until next Oct. 4.

Seven of the judges dissented from the ruling on a motion by Prosecutor Floyd Collar of Wood county. Attorneys for various public and private interests agreed that long delay was necessary to await a report by Army engineers on a flood control survey of the 15-county basin, and also to see what federal funds might be available.

The hearing reopened today after a six-week recess ordered in January to permit proper legal advertising.

TRUMAN ORDERS STEEL INQUIRY

By The Associated Press

WITH PRESIDENT TRUMAN IN THE CARIBBEAN, Feb. 24—President Truman today directed the justice department, the council of economic advisers and the commerce department to make a full inquiry into the increase in steel prices.

The orders went out by radio from the presidential yacht Williamsburg, said Eben Ayers, presidential assistant press secretary. Steel prices were increased about $5 a ton last week.

"The President had noted with concern the increase in steel prices," Ayers told reporters by radio telephone from the yacht to the escort ship Greenwich Bay, in which correspondents are traveling.

"He has directed all interested agencies of the government to inquire into the bases for the price increase and the consequences of it."

The President, deeply sunburned, is en route from the Virgin Islands to Cuba. He will go from Cuba to Florida.

Oil Heater Explosion Kills Child

FLAMES KEEP MOTHER FROM SAVING BABY

Although Burned, Suffocation Believed To Have Been Cause of Death.

Two-year-old Grover Wagner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Wagner of 165 Latourette street, died this morning as a result of a kerosene heating stove explosion in the tiny, converted house-trailer home of his parents.

It is believed his death was caused by suffocation, although the baby suffered third degree burns about his body.

Kerosene fire started a about 8:20 a. m. A neighbor boy, Lawrence Brown, 14, of 154 Latourette street, had just left his home for Edison Junior High school, when he saw the building across the street ablaze and heard Mrs. Wagner screaming for help.

He ran back inside and told his mother to call the fire department. His mother, Mrs. Jeffers Brown, called immediately.

But the house was already burning fiercely, smoke pouring out of the windows and doorway.

Mrs. Wagner, in almost hysterical condition, screamed for someone to get her baby, who had been left inside in its crib.

When firemen arrived a few minutes later, the baby was dead.

Mother Hysterical

In her first hysterical statements to firemen, who were called to the scene at 8:24 a. m., shortly after the explosion, Mrs. Wagner said she was just fitting the kerosene tank on the stove when it exploded.

She immediately ran out of the house, calling for help.

The baby, in his night clothes, was left in the crib.

Then, she said, after running out of the house, she was unable to reenter, the flames having spread over the floor.

In later statements, she said she had finished fitting the tank on the stove, but noticed that it burned with a white flame instead of a blue one. She left the house to ask a neighbor if anything could be wrong with the heater. After she left, it exploded, and the baby was trapped inside.

In both statements, she said that shortly before the explosion she had gone to a filling station for a can of kerosene, and had filled the empty tank. She filled it outside the home, she said.

Fire Chief Sifritt was unable to give an exact cause of the explosion.

The Wagners had just moved into the extended house-trailer over the weekend. Mr. Wagner, who had been employed as a processor with the Marion Engineer Depot, had left his work about a week ago to enter the the Lima District Tubercular hospital.

House Recently Constructed

Neighbors said the Wagners were the first tenants of the tiny home, which is owned by Mrs. Cora Lash of West Center street. Mrs. Lash, they said, had just finished building an extension on to the old house trailer.

319 Hear Local Businessmen Speak at Retail Institute

"Store Services to Increase Sales" was the topic of the program presented by five Marion business men at the fourth session of the Institute of Retail Training held last night in the Central Junior High school auditorium, with 319 Marion merchandisers in attendance.

Chamber of Commerce President Robert T. Mason was master of ceremonies for the program and opened the speaking program with a brief resume of the business experience of the speakers.

Cutler McGrew, veteran retailer and manager of the J. C. Penney store spoke on the subject, "Dramatization for Greater Profits", a presentation of the uses of display.

He first displayed a kit used in building window and door displays. In telling his audience how to put this kit to the best use he stressed the following facts of display work:

"First of all you must place the goods you want to sell right where the customer can see them. Remind your customer of the items he may have forgotten by placing those items right where he or she can't miss them. People buy goods they can find the easiest.

"Men are fast shoppers, they see what they want, and they buy it. Men's items should be placed close to the door in your store where the male customer can dash in, buy, and dash out."

Women Shop Leisurely

"Women are slower shoppers. You must arrange your store's departments to take advantage of the fact that women enjoy shopping and will spend hours at it. For women, put your staple merchandise farthest from the door and place all your fancy merchandise on the path between the door and the merchandise she came to buy. Place related lines together. For example place shirts next to the necktie department."

"Merchandise easy to find is merchandise easy to sell. Merchandise hard for the customer to find is never sold. Place your best merchandise at the eye level of your customer, place the next higher priced item on the shelf above the eye level and the next lower priced merchandise on the

Cafe Closing Change Defeated by Council

City council voted down an ordinance to change the closing time of cafes last night by a 7 to 2 majority in the presence of 200 interested citizens.

Clergymen, youth leaders, church groups and tavern keepers assembled in the Eagles hall where council moved from council chambers to accommodate the record crowd in attendance.

Frank Wiedemann, attorney representing the tavern keepers, presented the opening arguments for the ordinance. He stressed that the controversy over this measure was not a wet and dry fight. He explained provisions of the proposed ordinance and added that it would not increase the number of hours taverns would be open but only change the present opening from Sunday midnight to 2:30 a. m. Monday to a corresponding period beginning Saturday midnight to 2:30 a. m. Sunday. In exchange for this alteration in the ordinance the tavern keepers promised an all day Sunday closing and the present period which begins Sunday midnight would be foregone, he said. Wiedemann reminded council that formerly, up until last fall when the present ordinance was passed, taverns remained open until 2:30 Sunday morning but because of the lack of cooperation of one tavern owner the present law was enacted. Mr. Wiedemann stated that the tavern keepers he represented felt the present law to be unfair because it penalized all taverns for the actions of one tavern keeper.

Mayor Dowler at this point reminded Mr. Wiedemann that taverns formerly kept open until 1 a. m. in Marion until the supreme court decision on the Neil House case last year, which altered the regulating ability of municipalities. On this point Mr. Wiedemann agreed.

Ministers Protest

Rev. J. B. Holloway, pastor of Trinity Baptist church, then presented the first church opposition to the proposed ordinance. He said, "On behalf of the church I serve and its people whom I represent, I wish to go on record that we feel tavern conditions in Marion are far from 100 per cent of what they could be. Keeping these taverns open into the Lord's day would not improve these conditions. The law permits an over-plus of taverns now for a community of this size. On behalf of my church, its young people, and the Ministerial Association I would like to register a protest against this ordinance and state that we feel the change would worsen rather than better conditions in our city."

Dr. Edwin A. Brown, pastor of the Wesley Methodist church on Olney avenue, also addressed council, saying: "The 200 adults and young people meeting in my church yesterday morning have authorized me to appear before you to protest this proposed change of city ordinances. The moral and social hazards of our community will be increased by sales of liquor after the midnight hour and on the Sabbath. We are concerned with the moral and social aspects of this change and its effect up on the community.

"We believe that the proposed change by permitting the taverns to remain open at this late hour will contribute greatly to an increase in traffic hazards and juvenile delinquency. Juvenile delinquency and late hour drinking go hand in hand. The use of alcohol is a primary cause of broken homes in this city. This extension of time for liquor sales at this hour of the night will mean an increase in moral and social hazards for the community. Encroachments into the Sabbath by tavern keepers will pave the way for forcing the wet and dry issue in the future. On behalf of my own church I urge council to not extend the present ordinance."

Represents Youth Group

James Rea spoke against the ordinance on behalf of the United Christian Youth association. Mrs. C. A. Thomas, president of the Marion County W. C. T. U. opposed the ordinance on behalf of 700 members of her organization, stating she believed that tavern keepers could do enough business in six days to make a living. Miss Margaret Huffman, representing the advisory board of the United Christian Youth, and Mrs. Perry Strine of the Greenwood Evangelical United Brethren church also spoke in opposition to the ordinance.

Mayor Dowler then committed his administration in opposition to the bill. The mayor said "I wish to convey to you, the people of this community, that your city officials realize the importance of this legislation to the community and I wish to commit my administration in saying that we feel the present ordinance is just and fair and that we are opposed to changing it. further we believe that legislation forbidding the opening of taverns after midnight Sunday would find a warm reception with both the people of the community and their city officials." A burst of applause from the assembled church men greeted the mayor's statement.

The ordinance then went to a vote of council. Councilmen voted as follows: Yes, for changing the ordinance: Smith, Sanden. No, against changing the present or-

STAND TAKEN ON PALESTINE

U. S. Declares Readiness To Consult on Creation of International Force.

By The Associated Press

LAKE SUCCESS, Feb. 24—The United States today declared its readiness to consult on creation of an international force for Palestine if the United Nations security council voted for such a force.

The United States specified that any U.N. force must be "directed to keeping the peace and not to enforcing partition" of the Holy Land.

The U. S. position on the vital Palestine problem was laid before the security council by chief American Delegate Warren R. Austin.

Favors Maintaining Peace

"If the security council should decide that it is necessary to use armed force in maintaining international peace in connection with Palestine," Austin said, "the United States would be ready to consult under the charter with a view to such action as may be necessary to maintain international peace."

He declared such consultation would be necessary in view of the fact that no agreements have yet been reached by U.N. members as to how armed forces should be made available for peace enforcement.

Austin then set forth a three-point program of immediate action. He said:

"Although we do not wish to place specific resolutions before the council at this early stage of the discussion, my government believes we should have in mind the desirability of the following specific steps which the council might take at once:

"(A) To accept the tasks which the general assembly asked the security council to accept in its recommendation of Nov. 29, 1947, on Palestine subject to the authority of the security council under the charter;

"(B) To establish a committee of the council, comprising the five permanent members, to look at once into the question of the possible threats to international peace arising in connection with the Palestine situation and to consult with the Palestine commission, the mandatory power and representatives of the principal communities of Palestine concerning the implementation of the general assembly recommendations;

"(C) To call upon all governments and peoples, particularly in and around Palestine, to take all possible action to prevent or reduce the disorders now occurring in Palestine.

Just before Austin spoke, Dr. Karel Lisicky of Czechoslovakia told the council Jerusalem would be doomed unless the United Nations guards the Holy City effectively after Britain leaves.

WALLACE GIVES OWN ERP PLAN

Tells House Group "Twisted" Marshall Program Is "Blueprint for War."

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24—Henry A. Wallace said today "Wall Street monopolists" have twisted the original Marshall plan into an instrument for enslaving Europe. And he implied the present program will lead to war.

The third party presidential candidate described the European recovery plan as "a blueprint for war."

At his own request, Wallace appeared before the house foreign affairs committee. His arguments were contained in an 11,000-word prepared statement.

In advance of his testimony, the committee announced there would be no radio broadcast and television and newsreel cameras would be excluded. This brought a cry of "censorship" from Wallace supporters.

Most of Wallace's statement was devoted to his contention that "capitalists" have perverted the Marshall plan into a scheme for dominating world markets whereby they would be able to dictate the economic policies of the nations that take part in it.

At the same time, Wallace offered his own alternate plan for

Water Safety Program Regular Feature of Red Cross Service

The following is one of a series of articles describing the services of the American Red Cross which will launch its nationwide 1948 fund campaign March 1. A goal of $75,000,000 has been set for the nation and Marion county's quota is $25,985. Of the quota to be raised in Marion city and county $14,105, or 54 per cent, will remain here and $11,880 will be forwarded to national headquarters.

The water safety program is one of the many services provided by the Marion County Chapter of the American Red Cross. This is one of the many services financed through contributions made annually to the Red Cross Campaign Fund. The campaign will get under way March 1 to raise $25,985, the county's quota for this year.

Surveys conducted throughout the nation last year showed that a chance to learn to swim ranks high among the recreation desires of millions of Americans. To meet this need, Red Cross chapters are emphasizing "Learning to Swim" programs.

The Marion Chapter, with T. E. Brownlee as chairman of water safety last year, offered instruction in swimming to residents of Marion. In July, a three weeks "learn to swim" program was conducted at Crystal Lake park. Following the course, 47 persons received certificates; 25 completed the beginners course, 15 the intermediate, one the Junior life saving and six the senior life saving.

Authorized instructors of the courses were T. E. Brownlee, Paul Porter, Miss Helen Beal, Miss Patricia Wiant and Miss Josephine Judy. Charles Smith is the present chairman of water safety.

Since establishment of the Red Cross water safety service in 1914, the drowning rate in this country has been cut in half—from 10.4 to 5.1 per 100,000 annually—despite the fact that the number of persons who "go swimming" each year, now estimated at 80,000,000, has multiplied many times in those three decades.

More than 3,900 persons attended American Red Cross aquatic schools last summer to receive training as instructors in water safety and first aid at community pools, beaches, schools and camps.

The Red Cross convalescent swimming program likewise has grown during the past year and is now being widely used in reconditioning patients in Veterans Administration hospitals, in rehabilitating disabled veterans in colleges, and in community programs for crippled children and adults. Special classes also have been conducted for the blind and for the deaf.

JURY SEATING UNDER WAY IN COUNTY COURT

Ten Tentatively Chosen as Morning Session Comes To Close.

Ten prospective jurors, six men and four women, were tentatively seated this morning for the first degree murder trial of Edwin D. Young, charged with the slaying of Mrs. Zora Gerbes last July 11.

A change of venue sought by defense attorney Paul D. Michel does not appear likely to be granted by the court, as only 27 names were called from the venire in obtaining the first ten prospective jurors.

Common Pleas Judge Paul D. Smith previously had ruled that the motion for a change in venue would be heard only if difficulty were experienced in seating a jury.

Those Tentatively Seated

Seated after being examined by Judge Smith and Prosecutor James E. Reed and Mr. Michel were: John Brady, electrician, of Waldo; Mrs. Margaret Oiler, housewife, of 412½ Silver street; Ed Kraner, farmer of Route 2, Marion; Miss Elsie I. Hecker, North Main street, Marion; Mrs. E. J. Hollandshead, housewife, of 213 Wildwood court; Max Birnbaum, 148 McWilliams court, operator of the Marion Window Washing Co.; Don J. Flach, 252 Lincoln avenue, employe of Wiant's Bookstore; Albert Corwin, 348 South Prospect street, operator of restaurant at the Mar-O-Del golf course; Howard R. Garey, 130 Franconia avenue, electrical and refrigeration contractor and Mrs. Edith Warner, housewife of 393 Windsor street.

Two Accepted, Then Rejected

Two others were passed both in the preliminary examination by Judge Smith and by the state and defense but were removed after reconsideration by the court and the attorneys. They were Mrs. Nellie B. Irey of 220 Hane avenue, former principal of the Greenwood School and Mark Bowe of 824 Mt. Vernon avenue, partner in the Bowe Ice Cream Co. The prosecutor had previously served as legal advisor to Mrs. Irey while Mr. Michel had acted in that capacity for Mr. Bowe.

Reasons for Rejection

Majority of the prospective jurors excused after preliminary examination by Judge Smith said they did not believe in capital punishment. One was excused as he was hard of hearing and one other for religious scruples against serving on a jury for a murder trial. Very few gave preconceived opinion as the reason they felt they could not serve as impartial jurors.

Excused were R. Carl Haas, 686 Mt. Vernon avenue; Ray Reidenbaugh, 297 Windsor street; John H. Moore, 588 Cleveland avenue; Clyde L. Porter, 275 Cass avenue; Lois Augenstein, 626 Windsor street; F. J. Fox, RD 1, Morral; Minnie M. Hurr, 406 Windsor street; Pearl Iams, 324 Owens street; Carl Perry of Martel; Florence M. Goff, 318 Hane avenue; Jacob Barkley, RD 2, Cardington; William J. Mahaffy, 395 Silver street; Mabel Snyder, 384 Monroe street; Elizabeth McGrath, 945 East Church street, and Maud Brady of Richwood.

Young in New Attire

Young brought into court as the session opened shortly after 9 a.m., sat at counsel table with his attorney. He was attired in a new blue suit, a white shirt and brown shoes. Sheriff LeRoy Retterer and deputy George L. Conroy were seated immediately behind Young.

Young, his face impassive, chewed gum stolidly. He appeared but faintly interested in the proceedings, appearing to show interest mainly in the manner in which his counsel questioned prospective jurors. For the better part of the morning he leaned forward, arms crossed, elbows resting on the counsel table. He spoke not at all.

"Manslaughter" Emphasized

In examining jurors attorney Michel repeatedly hammered home the word manslaughter, asking each if he or she could return such a verdict if the evidence indicated that it was warranted. He used such terms as "in the heat of passion," "suddenly aroused by anger," "provoked by words or deeds." He also asked jurors if, should the court rule out a confession as evidence, they would be able to overcome any opinion the confession may have formed in their minds in relation to the case.

Particular About "Opinions"

Michel questioned closely in reference to possibility of previously formed opinions influencing prospective jurors. After examining one juror in particular who maintained she could still abide by the weight of evidence and return an impartial verdict despite the fact that she had formed an

Roving Reports

By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK

ONCE upon a time there was a poor little boy named Ebenezer [illegible].

When he was five years old a stranger gave him a bright new nickel. It was the first money Ebenezer had ever seen. The shiny coin hypnotized him.

"I want a million just like it," decided the boy. At an age when other lads aspired to be cops or firemen Ebenezer knew that he wanted to be—a successful miser.

The little [illegible] went right to work. Everything he earned he saved. He [illegible] at every other [illegible] job, but never [illegible] out a penny to [illegible] one himself.

When he was 20 he left [illegible] family. He was afraid they'd [illegible] the nickels hidden in the closet. He moved into a [illegible] basement room in a coldwater flat.

He never saw a baseball game, bought a drink or had a date with a girl. His idea of fun was to stand [illegible] subway station and listen to the music of nickels dropping into the turnstiles.

During his thirty-first year he was afraid his stacks of nickels would collapse the floor of his ramshackle room. So he began trading them in for pictures of Benjamin Franklin—on $100 bills.

When he was 45 he was fired from the loan shark firm that employed him. Ebenezer had been coming to work every day for six years in the same seedy suit he bought at a fire sale.

"He looks too much like one of our customers," complained the manager. "Gives the place a bad name."

Ebenezer never held a job after that. He lived completely off the cuff. He got his shoes and newspapers from trash cans. Janitors supplied him with castoff clothing, and he soon built up a list of old maids who were good for a handout once a week. He also learned that cafeteria patrons often leave tasty tidbits on their unfinished plates.

HIS MONEY KEPT growing. Ebenezer sat during the day on the steps of an abandoned building in Greenwich village. He never begged, but tourists often mistook him for an unemployed Rembrandt and tossed him coins.

When he was 75 years old, he sat down one night on a park bench beside a drunken old bum.

"I can't kick at life," said the bum. "I been everywhere and seen everything. I had three wives and I made $15,000 a year in my time. Spent it all on booze and women. If I had it back, I'd do it all all over again."

"I never went with a girl or tasted liquor in my life," said Ebenezer, feeling sorry for himself.

The old bum fixed him with a rye-colored eyeball:

"You look like you got one foot in the grave now. Why don't you [illegible] and go on a spree before it's too late?"

EBENEZER SHUFFLED to home. The old bum's reference to death frightened him. When he had lit the candle end in his room, and sat down on his old orange crate, he began to think.

"Why shouldn't I have some fun? Just this once."

But what to do? He couldn't stuff himself to a steak dinner, or [illegible]. His [illegible] stomach would collapse from surprise. Then Ebenezer saw the candle begin to flicker and he had an idea.

Quickly he lifted a loose board and pulled out his savings of seventy years. He counted them as he did every evening. There were 1,000 $50 bills and five $1 bills—$50,005 in all.

EBENEZER GINGERLY pulled out a one-dollar bill and held it over the candle. Fascinated, he watched as the flame flared up and licked the green bill. In terror and delight he held up the other four $1 bills, one after another, and watched them burn to ashes. He hadn't had so much fun since he got his first nickel.

As the candle died out Ebenezer put the remaining $50,000 in his bed, pulling some gunny sacks over him.

"Boy, oh boy, what an evening!" he said. "Another night like this would kill me."

Moral: You're never too old to have fun—if you've still got money to burn.

DAILY LENTEN MEDITATION

CHRIST in You, THE HOPE of Glory

The Love of God

John 3:16: "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

IT DOES seem to me that if there is anything that will cause [illegible] to make "Christ in you the hope of Glory" it is because of the love of God as expressed to all mankind in John 3:16 and Jesus Christ so loved all people that He came to earth, born in Bethlehem of Judaea, and when He became thirty years of age He went out to show His love to all, and because of His goodness He was condemned to death on the Cross, and while on the Cross He prayed for them that did Him the wrong, "Father forgive them for they know not what they do" and when that penitent malefactor asked to be remembered: "Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, Today shalt thou be with Me in paradise."

May God so direct our heart and life so that each one who reads these words will give God through Jesus Christ the first place in life, and receive the forgiveness of all sins and be granted a home in paradise with Jesus the Christ our Saviour, Redeemer and Lord.

REV. H. N. DOERRES,

The Evangelical and Reformed church charge, Waldo.

Love's Perilous Path

By ADELE GARRISON

THE reactions of Mr. "K.," my father's FBI confidential assistant, are like lightning. One instant he had been gloating laughingly like a school boy at my promise of one of Katie's chicken dinners, the next, at the blasting sound and the swerving of the big armored car, he was on his feet, revolver appearing apparently from nowhere in his hand, and springing to the front of the car.

"If there's trouble, Mrs. Graham," he commanded as he went, "you have Georges pull up that seat you're going to use as a bed, and crouch behind it."

"There's no trouble if Joe can straighten out this car," Gus gasped, and I guessed that his own nerves were a bit frazzled. "It's just a nasty blow-out. There! he's licked it."

The car had come to a stop by the side of the road after two or three alarming lurches, and Joe slid from the driver's seat, giving a quick glance at the revolver in Mr. "K's" hand.

"We may be able to use that, and you," he said laconically. "I don't want to change this tire till we get to a place I know of, but the boys and I will have to slip the gear under it that will let it go along on the rim till we get where we want to go. Gus can stay in here with Mrs. Graham, and it will be fine if you can stand near us with that gat handy and your eyes open. No telling what might sneak out of the bushes."

"Have you gone nutty, talking about bushes, Joe?" Gus, always literal-minded, asked. "There ain't even a smear of grass on this street, nothing but stores and walk-ups."

"They're worse than bushes," Joe said. He is so used to Gus that he rarely stops to explain his sometimes bizarre speech to his slower-witted, but wholly reliable comrade. "And now, Mr. 'K.,' if you'll only step out with me and these two boys, we'll get busy. Gus, you lock that door behind us but stand ready right at it so you can open it if we have to come a-running."

I did not think I'd feared any real danger, in every intimation, but at one of my father's aides so meticulously trained by him, he leaves nothing whatever to chance, no possible loophole carelessly unguarded.

Behind me Georges raised his voice.

"Can't I help?" he asked. "I too have a revolver, and am [illegible]."

There was no boasting in his voice, only sure knowledge of his own prowess, and intense eagerness to get into whatever fray was handy. Georges' worst enemy could not accuse him of cowardice without lying in his teeth, [illegible] ly [illegible].

"Sorry, old man!" The voice of "K." was suddenly cordial with recognition of the other man's bravery. "If we need you outside we'll yell, and you come a-running.

"But just now," he went on, "you can be of the most use by sticking close to Mrs. Graham. Gus also will be on guard here in the front, but he'll be attending to the door. You won't have anything on your mind but Mrs. Graham, and I know I won't have to worry about her."

He went out of the door without waiting for an answer, and Georges looked after him a bit ruefully.

"He throws his weight around a lot, that chap, as you Americans say," he muttered, but I ignored the comment.

"I am so relieved that it is only a blowout," I said. "When I heard the blast, I thought it was gun fire, and that some of your enemies had found out your whereabouts and were trailing you."

"I wish they were," Georges said, undaunted. "I'd like to come to grips with them."

I knew he was speaking only the truth, and was glad that I could change my just censure of Georges to [illegible]

[illegible]

"Are you mad?" I asked him sharply. [illegible] after my [illegible] I went [illegible].

"But [illegible] exceedingly sharp [illegible]. Besides that thing the men are putting under the tire that has blown out takes but a minute or two to adjust. They will be back in here [illegible]."

If Stomach Gas or Sour Food Taste Robs You of Sleep

Here's How You May Help, Whether You Eat 500 Pounds or 2000 Pounds of Food In a Year

You can't feel cheerful, be happy and sleep well, if your stomach is always upset. As age advances the "old stomach" needs more help. The reason is this:

Everytime food enters the stomach a vital gastric juice must flow normally to break-up certain food particles; else the food may ferment. Sour food, acid indigestion and gas frequently cause a morbid, touchy, fretful, peevish, nervous condition, loss of appetite, underweight, restless sleep, weakness.

To get real relief you must increase the flow of this vital gastric juice. Medical authorities, in independent laboratory tests on human stomachs, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in increasing this flow when it is too little or scanty due to a non-organic stomach disturbance. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains very special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps build-up non-organic, weak, watery blood in nutritional anemia—so with a good flow of this gastric digestive juice, plus rich red-blood you should eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better.

Avoid punishing yourself with overdoses of soda and other alkalizers to counteract gas and bloating when what you so dearly need is SSS Tonic to help you digest food for body strength and repair. Don't wait! Join the host of happy people SSS Tonic has helped. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle of SSS Tonic from your drug store today. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Fichter Urges Making Farm Life Attractive

By The Associated Press

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Feb. 24—Ohio's Grange master, Joseph W. Fichter, believes farm life must be made attractive to children.

Fichter, in a speech yesterday before the American Association of School Administrators' Rural Education Development, described migrations from rural to urban areas as "detrimental to all society."

"Rural schools should cause children who have the good fortune to be on a farm to realize the opportunities for enjoyable living it offers," Fichter continued, "and our city schools should include subjects and experiences which will arouse the desire . . . whereby people may free themselves from the confinement and limitations of city life."

It is said that the port of Vigo, Spain, has a "silverplated" harbor because of the sinking of Spanish treasure ships there in 1702.

Global Scene

By DeWitt Mackenzie

LITTLE Czechoslovakia's struggle to escape the Communist net — a valiant but tiny state against the might of Red Russia —presents one of the gripping dramas of this day of tragedies.

It's one whose every move we should watch, for it provides a more open view of Bolshevist methods than we have had in most cases heretofore. We have seen plenty of countries grabbed and crushed, but many of the details were concealed behind the Iron Curtain. Now — for the moment, at least — Czechoslovakia's trial is laid bare.

MACKENZIE

There's a double reason for watching this struggle closely, because from its inception it has been typical of what we know communist tactics have been elsewhere. First there is the quiet infiltration by Moscow's trained fifth columnists — the intensive organization of strategically placed cells in education circles, in political bodies and trade unions—the capture of important executive positions. Then when all is ready—the death blow to liberty.

So we should keep an eye on Czechoslovakia, because what is happening there could happen in the United States or Canada or Latin America if we don't recognize the danger in time and forestall it. It could happen anywhere you can name, with Bolshevism avowedly out to conquer the world.

Top American diplomatic authorities in Washington view the political upheavel in Czechoslovakia as part of a plan by Moscow to complete its control of eastern Europe. This proud and intensely independent republic is the last hold-out among the small nations in the Soviet zone of domination. True, Finland still keeps her chin up—but she isn't arguing with the Muscovites. The diplomatic authorities in Washington say they have no doubt that Moscow is directing the political strategy of Klement Gottwald, Czechoslovakia's Communist premier.

WHAT PRECIPITATED the immediate crisis was the resignation of eight anti-Communist ministers from the coalition National Front government. President Eduard Benes declined to accept the resignations, declaring that the coalition must continue. Red Premier Gottwald insisted that the resignations be accepted and that the Communists be allowed to fill their places, but Benes was adamant.

Gottwald promptly threw his Red machine into high gear. His minister of the interior—a Communist—flung his security police before all government buildings and foreign embassies.

Opposition speech was at least partly stifled. Police arrested notable foes of Communism. Police armed with machineguns seized the headquarters of the anti-Communist Czech National Socialist party. Czechoslovakians to all intents were confined to the country by a ministry of interior order requiring new visas on passports.

IN SHORT, CZECHOSLOVAKIA was transformed into what amounted to a police state. Apropos of this it should be noted that this was made possible by the fact that the Communists hold the ministry of the interior, which controls the police. In taking over a state one of the first things the Communists always reach for is this ministry.

The big questions now are: Will the Russians dare challenge world opinion by using force to take over this small, thirty-year-old republic? If the Bolshevists do use force, will the people fight? Or if the citizens have the determination to fight, will they have the strength?

This is a crucial moment for the future of free men.

Your Good Health

By DR. HERMAN N. BUNDESEN

Stuttering Usually Caused By Emotional Tension

To the modern doctor, stuttering in children is but a symptom. Just as fever indicates an underlying and sometimes hidden infection, so stuttering usually gives evidence of an inner emotional tension which may be shown in no other way.

It would appear that one of the most frequent factors leading to stuttering lies in the attitude of the mother toward the child. The mother of a stutterer is likely to be domineering, over-protective, and over-anxious about the child's feeding and health. Such a mother may create an excessive amount of restlessness in the child, and, because of her concern about his health and safety, may cut down too much on the child's activities.

The second factor is over-anxiety on the part of the parents about the normal occurrence of repetition in the child's speech. Little children often repeat syllables several times. When this happens, the parents tell the child to speak more slowly and to think before he speaks. Thus, the child's attention is focused on his faults of speech, and the more conscious he is of them the more likely he is to stutter.

Today's doctors find it very significant that stuttering is rare in primitive civilizations where no pressure is put on children to speak correctly or to behave in other ways according to a strict pattern laid down by the parents.

Stuttering begins most often in children between the ages of two and four. It is more common in boys than in girls. The child under six who stutters, often can be helped merely by treatment of the adults around him. The attitude of the parents toward the child must be corrected and the tension and excitement must be eliminated. Often such treatment alone permits the child to regain normal speech.

Children over six require speech training but this should not be given in groups. Speech correction classes, which attempt to teach stutterers as a group, only focus the child's attention on his difficulty, and thus may make the condition worse.

Treatment of the older child also requires that a study be made of his surroundings and the attitudes of his parents, so that those creating undue strain can be eliminated. Only when the underlying cause of the emotional disturbance at the root of his faulty speech is found and done away with, will the child be able to correct his stuttering.

If the stuttering child is to be helped, his treatment must be individualized, that is each child must be studied and a program, suited to his needs alone, worked out and followed.

Questions and Answers

D. M.: Is there any danger of liver infection developing into cirrhosis of the liver.

Answer: As a general rule, it is not believed that cirrhosis of the liver is due to liver infection. The exact cause of this condition has not been determined in all cases, but in some it is due to a diet lacking in certain essential foods, notably vitamin B-complex.

The Noose Tightens

A DECADE ago Czechoslovakia was the only country on Germany's eastern border that wasn't [illegible] in some degree to the Nazi [illegible]. Although a nation young in years, it was prosperous and the democratic tradition had [illegible] there.

Today it again is under [illegible] pressure, this time from the opposite direction. The Communists already have a foot in the door. The Communist premier is making demands of President Benes, and there have been the inevitable spontaneous demonstrations in Prague and other large cities.

The Communist [illegible] in Czechoslovakia is developing as it did in Hungary. A well-knit Communist party, polling considerable less than a majority, gets its officials in key offices, tightens its grip on the police and intimidates those who speak out against it. Requests suddenly become demands. The opposition press is throttled. Officials who speak out against terrorism are in danger of their lives.

All isn't lost yet in Czechoslovakia but the outlook is dark.

The Master Juggler Is Gone

SKEPTICS WHO doubted that the New Deal ever was built on anything more substantial than a loose coalition of disagreeing minorities used to be accused of political spitework. The New Deal, its defenders claimed, was a genuine party program, backed by the earnest convictions of a cohesive organization of Americans bound together by common convictions about the structure and aims of the United States.

But the skeptics didn't quit doubting. They waited to see what would happen. Their belief that time would prove that the New Deal was an unnatural coalition held together by the political personality of Franklin D. Roosevelt is being vindicated. The coalition's true nature is being disclosed by men like James A. Farley, Cordell Hull and John N. Garner; by the third-party movement of Henry A. Wallace; by the angry dissent of the South to President Truman's civil rights program; by repudiation of the old-line Democratic organization in the Bronx; and by Mr. Truman's desperate efforts to find a rallying point for its disintegrating elements in time for this year's national election.

It's plain now that Mr. Roosevelt's ability to get votes was the only thing that held the coalition together. After the 1932 election he became an indispensable personality in politics. The minorities that needed him were juggled and appeased so successfully that they gave the appearance of a political party without being one. They ranged from southerners who could be appeased with patronage to labor leaders who could be appeased with a wink at sitdown strikes. They were as far apart as John L. Lewis and John N. Garner. They were red-tinged voters in New York City and ward heelers in Chicago. They had only one thing in common—to keep Mr. Roosevelt in office because he had a receptive ear for all of them and a marvelous way of giving them most of what they wanted.

He was a master at the political juggling needed to keep this unnatural arrangement intact. Occasionally, he lost a labor leader who couldn't be satisfied, or offended a politician (the John Lewis and Alben Barkley incidents come to mind) but his power at the polls never was seriously hurt. It was plain that something would happen to break up the coalition eventually, but no one could predict what it might be, except Mr. Roosevelt's death.

That is, of course, what happened. Mr. Truman is he the master juggler. The coalition is falling is he the master uggler. The coalition is falling apart. The fall thereof is more and more shaping up like the great political event of 1948, with a Republican victory next November coming as an anti-climax.

The Report Is Favorable

RETURN of Washington's Senator Cordon from Hawaii with a favorable report on the statehood bill should bring the measure to a vote in the upper house.

With Republican and Democratic leaders supporting it there is no reason for further delay. The islands have been seeking statehood more than 30 years. Scores of congressmen have visited them on inspection tours and most of their reports have been favorable. Hawaii's congressional delegates and the interior and commerce departments have reams of statistics about the island's wealth, trade, racial amity, education, health, etc. If the islands ever are to receive statehood they deserve it now.

The house passed the measure last year, but unless the senate votes on it before adjournment, the lower chamber's vote will be nullified. When one house passes a bill during the first session of a congressional term, the other chamber has a duty to act on the measure during the same term.

Scanning the Record

By George E. Sokolsky

Right To Petition Sometimes an Idle Promise

ONE of the inalienable rights of an American citizen is "to petition the government for a redress of grievances." That appears in the first amendment to the Constitution to the extent that Congress can not pass any law abridging, limiting or altering that right.

So much for the Constitution. When it comes to actual practice, it is [illegible] depends [illegible] belonging to a powerful pressure group. If he makes [illegible] that speaking to the government [illegible] there [illegible] and [illegible] And there [illegible]

A case in point [illegible] a Connecticut [illegible] Van Newkirk, a [illegible] of America [illegible] in New [illegible] [illegible] says he was apparently not a [illegible] something that a citizen does not count.

SOKOLSKY

It seems that Van Newkirk was the chief engineer on the SS [illegible], this ship being owned by the people of the United States through their agent, the maritime commission. He was the chief engineer of such ship during September, 1944. He was required to certify for payment extra wages, called overtime, which he could not in conscience do because he regarded it as a deliberate theft of public money, and being a stubborn and self-respecting New Englander, he declined to put his name to the approval of a theft.

He Made Enemies

He thus incurred the enmity of the Pacific Coast Firemen, Oilers, Watertenders and Wipers Association with whom the government of the United States had entered into an agreement for the supply of labor to the exclusion of non-members. So on Nov. 13, 1944, W. W. Jordan and J. Davidson, according to Van Newkirk, boarded the ship to beat him up. He applied to the disciplinary unit of the Coast Guard which notified him that nothing could be done. In a word, he could not even get ordinary police protection. To this Van Newkirk swears in an affidavit.

Van Newkirk went looking as to what can be done about such things and he is still [illegible]. According to Assistant United States Attorney McLaughlin in New York, no statute applies. Anybody may beat up a chief engineer on a ship owned by the American people. Van Newkirk went before a grand jury, but the attorney McLaughlin opposed not only action but even an investigation. I am taking this from the petition for a redress of grievances.

When Van Newkirk tried to get a court order, he was told to try a congressional investigation. Meanwhile, the [illegible] union put a boycott on Van Newkirk, forbidding its members to sail with him. Therefore he could not get a job.

So Van Newkirk, in pursuance of the law, petitioned the maritime commission for redress of grievances, receiving no hearing, no acknowledgement in any form whatsoever until Sept. 17, 1946, which date followed a petition to the President of the United States. He also petitioned the committee on merchant marine and fisheries of the house of representatives, then headed by Schuyler Otis Bland of Virginia.

Raised Two Questions

Nowhere did he get any action because inadvertently he was raising two questions: One, the right of union representatives to beat up a chief engineer of a United States-owned ship; the other, and this is dynamite, the right of workers to steal the money of the American people by faking overtime. It was the second question that got him the run-around. It was too hot to handle.

So far as the President of the United States is concerned, the two petitions addressed to him were undoubtedly put on the line, passing from hand to hand, and ultimately landing in some pigeonhole. Nobody ever said, "Brother, you got a raw deal. We are sorry. But votes is votes. You only have one vote; the unions have millions of votes."

Leslie Biffle, the amiable friend of the President, when asked to present the petition, wrote:

"I do not feel that I am in a position to present this to the President. I regret that I am unable to be more encouraging in my letter to you."

So much for the right of petition.

Problem Clarified for House

By Walter Lippmann

THE fact that the senate committee has made a unanimous report on a bill for what is now to be known as the European Recovery Administration simplifies and clarifies the problem in the house. On all those features of the bill which have to do with foreign policy—with conditions, with ways of relating its purposes to the State Department and to foreign governments—the judgment of the Senate ought under our constitutional system be given special weight.

LIPPMANN

The burden of proof would be on any one in the House who wishes to change those terms of the Vandenberg bill. It would be for him to show not merely that he would prefer a different bill but that the Vandenberg bill is seriously defective.

For it may be taken for granted that responsible leaders in the House have been consulted, all the serious objections have been considered, that all the alternatives have been weighed, and that the unanimous opinion of the Senate committee is as good a collective judgment as can be had. For the whole undertaking is in the nature of an experiment, and no one can be perfectly sure that he is altogether right.

It's a Money Bill

The main role of the House arises out of the fact that this is a money bill, and it must therefore pass primarily on whether the authorizations and appropriations are to be approved. This gives it, of course, an equal voice in the decision as to whether the bill as a measure of foreign policy is to be adopted. But it would be going beyond the spirit of the Constitution if it sought to originate, control or direct foreign policy.

Would Add Confusion

There would, therefore, be little point in reopening all the issues which the Senate committee resolved, no point at all in attempting to write a different bill. The responsible leaders of the House would only be confusing matters if they started all over again—ignoring the labors of the Senate and the unanimity of the committee. In the eyes of the country and of the world they would appear contentious and vain. They would contribute nothing to the public interest and they would impair their own prestige.

This great measure is not only a contribution to recovery, reconstruction and peace. It is a demonstration—unique in history—of a free people's concern for the well being of mankind. Nothing quite like it, and on such a scale, has ever before been conceived, and after long debate accepted and established.

The fact that the American people will themselves benefit if recovery and peace are brought nearer does not make the thing less inspiring. For though it is no doubt a measure of enlightened self-interest, it is unusually enlightened. Where and when in the relation of states, not to speak of continents and hemispheres, has anything like it been undertaken?

Attitudes Vary

There are some few who do not like it, others who do not understand it, and abroad there are many who simply cannot believe it. They cannot believe that a nation can make a substantial, material contribution to the general welfare and not demand in return a substantial, material quid pro quo. They will have to learn to believe it, and in the meantime their skepticism about our purpose, their attribution to us of imperialistic and other sinister designs is in a curious way flattering. For it expresses their recognition that the undertaking is in fact enormous, and their inability to believe that a great power could in such an enormous undertaking be animated by a concern for the common welfare.

Yet that is the way it is. And because it is that way we should be very jealous of higgling and niggling in the debate which would bring this great measure down from the high plane on which it now rests.

Red Creed 100 Years Old

THE Communist Manifesto, one of the most significant pieces of writing of the last 100 years, is now at the end of its 1st century.

Its authors, Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels, had met in Paris in 1844. Both had been born into comfortable homes in Germany, Engels in 1820 and Marx in 1818. They went to Brussels in 1847, where they learned for the first time how working people lived. The League of Communists commissioned the two young scholars to prepare a pamphlet. This was to become famous as the Communist Manifesto. It went to the printer at the end of January, 1848.

The word "socialism," coming into general use around 1830, signified largely what today is called "utopianism." Socialists of that era deplored the system of producing and distributing goods for private profit, but thought the system could and would be replaced as men became convinced it was morally wrong.

The term "communist" was adopted around 1840 by those opposed to the capitalist system but equally opposed to the "unscientific" remedies of the socialists. Today the essential difference between communists and non-communist socialists remains the communist belief that socialism can be established only by revolution and (temporary) dictatorship of the workers, and the socialist belief that Socialism must be a gradual development achieved and maintained through peaceful persuasion and the process of political democracy.

Leadership Is Lost

By Raymond Moley

AFTER poking around on the blood-stained battlefield of the Bronx this reporter has made several conclusions which are somewhat at variance with earlier news stories.

The first conclusion is that voters did not love Wallace more, but Truman less. In 1946, the Democratic victor, Ben Rabin, received 32,316 votes. In the special election last week, the Democratic candidate, Karl Propper, received 12,578. This is a catastrophic showing of democratic indifference. The district is populous and one of the best organized parts of Edward J. Flynn's efficiently appointed Bronx County. In 1944, the Democrat received [illegible] votes, or 55 per cent of the total. And it must be noted that Flynn never accepted the support of the minor parties. These figures represent straight democratic votes.

MOLEY

It is true that the Republican vote faded away, too—from 15,931 in 1946 to 1,487 in 1948. But the Republican party in the Bronx is a phony. Its boss holds a county job at the sufferance of Flynn.

The Wallace-backed American Labor Party candidate was not the beneficiary of the Democratic fade-out. In 1946, the A. L. P. candidate received 24,249 votes. This year, the score of the victor, Leo Isacson, fell off to 22,697.

When catastrophe comes to a well-disciplined machine, the finger of blame is first pointed at the boss. Then the boss lambastes the district leaders. Sometimes a few heads roll. In this case, the whole blame cannot fall upon County Chairman Flynn. It is admitted that his lieutenants seem to have been afflicted with political gout, induced, no doubt, by rich feeding at the New Deal patronage counter and by the sluggishness which grows on continuous victory. In past years, a Democrat simply could not lose in the Bronx. This time even Flynn, who in this reporter's book is the most realistic and shrewd political leader in these states, actually expected to win although by a reduced majority. His information from the lower hierarchy of the machine indicated safe weather for his candidate. Needless to say, he is greatly troubled by what happened.

Leadership Gone

But what Flynn cannot say publicly is that something is happening in the big cities that no patronage and no organization discipline can stop. The melting away of the Democratic vote in this election is not even in major part due to bugs in the machine. Its basic cause is in the fact that there is a silent grave in Hyde Park and there is only an uninspired and uninspiring shadow of leadership in the White House.

From time to time over the past two years a suggestion has appeared in this column that President Truman cannot win, for a reason he can do nothing about. He can promise and he can blame Republicans. He can make friends with labor and pacify farmers. But that indefinable elixir which inspired the masses in our cities, that almost fanatical zeal for F. D. R. which sent masses thundering to the polls, that loyalty which would hear no wrong of Roosevelt is gone. And nobody can do anything about it. If, as is probable, the Democratic vote in a dozen cities goes down 10 or 15 per cent, all the Republicans need do is to hold their 1944 strength and they can win.

Appeal Is Absent

Flynn, after 15 years' experience as leader, calculates that any machine, however efficient, can deliver only about 10 to 12 per cent of the registered party vote. The rest must be snared by the personality or appeal of the candidate. With Truman running instead of Roosevelt, that appeal is simply absent.

Palestine, civil rights, peace with Russia, Communistic activity—all had a part in the Bronx vote. But the real trouble was Roosevelt-deficiency.

Secret study, silent thought, is, after all, the mightiest agent in human affairs.—Channing.

James Marlow

Form W-2 is the receipt given an employe by a boss for tax withheld in 1947. Full tax is supposed to have been withheld from all wages and salaries up to $5,000.

So if your 1947 income was under $5,000 and all in wages or salaries from which tax regularly was withheld, use Form W-2.

Suppose your total income was under $5,000 but tax had not been withheld from all of it. Can you use Form W-2?

Yes but only if—

The non-taxed income was no more than $100 and—watch these three important items—came from (1) interest, (2) dividends, or (3) wages from which tax was not withheld.

Suppose your total income was less than $5,000 and tax had been withheld from all but $100 which came from things like rents or professional fees. Can you use Form W-2?

No Use the 1040 short form.

Use of Form W-2

Suppose your total income was under $5,000 and tax was withheld from most of it but you had more than $100 income—of any kind—from which no tax was withheld.

In that case you can't use Form W-2 But so long as your total income was under $5,000, use the 1040 short-form

Husbands and wives can make a joint return on Form W-2:

▶1. If their combined income, from which tax was regularly withheld, was under $5,000

▶2. And if any additional income—from interest, dividends or wages from which tax was not withheld—was no more than $100 and the total income of both was under $5,000.

What if their combined income was $5,000 or more but individually less than $5,000?

They file separate returns on Form W-2 or a joint return on the 1040 long form which, as noted, is for income of $5,000 or more.

They can not file a joint return if their combined income was $5,000 or more, on the 1040 short-form which is for income less than $5,000

Deduction Allowed

Husbands and wives can not file separately on Form W-2 in the nine community property states of Arizona, California, Idaho, Louisiana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Texas and Washington

But in those states they can file separately on the 1040 short-form if the individual salaries were under $5,000.

Every one using Form W-2 is automatically allowed, before his income is taxed a 10 per cent deduction for things like medical expenses and charitable contributions

So, in using Form W-2, you don't list deductions You get that 10 per cent allowance without asking

If your actual deductions run more than 10 per cent you'll lose money by using Form W-2.

Use, instead, the 1040 long-form where you'll have to itemize your deductions but can take full credit for them.

Next: How To Use Form W-2.

Bucyrus 1947 Fire Loss Lowest in Five Years

Special to The Star

BUCYRUS—Bucyrus per capita fire loss was at the lowest figure in five years in 1947, Fire Chief William F. Maser disclosed today as he placed on file the annual report which shows total loss from fire in the city of $12,693.47. Per capita figure is $1.31, a drop from the 1946 figure of $6.52 per capita loss.

Lowest per capita loss for any one year on record was in 1933 when the figure was just four cents per capita.

Prospects of the 1948 loss look dark with two fires, the Crawford Steel Foundry with loss estimated at $20,000 and the residence of Mrs. Hazel Campbell damaged in the amount of $6,000, already on record.

DEMOCRATIC WAR RAGES UNABATED

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24—The civil rights war within Democratic ranks raged unabated today, fired by a new attack of southern governors on the party's high command.

Four Dixie governors, fresh from a meeting with National Chairman J. Howard McGrath, promised to use "whatever means are necessary" to block President Truman's race equality program.

As a clear indication of what they have in mind, the four declared in a former statement:

"The southern states are aroused and the present leadership of the Democratic party will soon realize that the south is no longer 'in the bag.'"

Despite his blast, McGrath appeared to feel he had made some headway against the southland revolt.

He told a news conference he gained the impression the meeting "resulted in good understanding." He added he hopes it will "lessen the split in the party."

During the get-together, McGrath said he, for one, appreciates the south's loyalty to the party.

"I don't take the attitude they are with us anyway, so the 'I' with them," he told Govs. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, Ben T. Laney of Arkansas, Beauford Jester of Texas and R. Gregg Cherry of North Carolina.

But McGrath said flatly he will not try to have the President's civil rights program withdrawn from congress as the governors demanded.

Nor will he agree to return to the two-thirds convention rule under which the south once held a veto over presidential candidates.

McGrath did, however, adopt a more conciliatory attitude on some points during the hour and a half he spent behind closed doors with the governors.

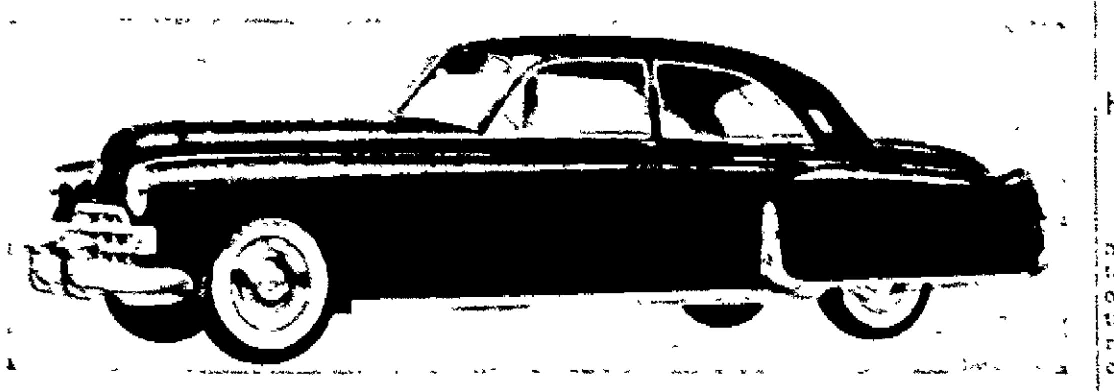
McDaniel Motor Co. Displays 1948 Cadillac



CADILLAC'S 1948 MODEL SERIES 60 SPECIAL TOURING SEDAN

The 1948 Cadillac, introducing a new conception of automotive luxury and functional beauty in the modern manner, was revealed publicly today by John F. Gordon, general manager of Cadillac Motor Car Division and vice president of General Motors Corporation. A 1948 model is on display at the West Center street showroom of the McDaniel Motor Co.

The new Cadillacs embody and enchance post-war design trends while retaining the traditional Cadillac dignity.

Length and sleekness are emphasized in the side-approach. Front fenders blend smoothly into the extended sides of the body, continuing to the rear fenders in an unbroken line. Rear ends of the rear fenders are raised to form vertical fins reminiscent of aircraft design embodying new tail and directional lamps fitted into the trailing edges of the rear fenders. The rear deck is longer and lower, giving a compelling illusion of suave surge to the entire car.

Frontal approach to the 1948 Cadillac emphasizes the car's road-hugging lowness and massive width. The radiator grille is lower and wider, consisting only of two horizontal chrome bars, divided by seven vertical fins of stainless steel. Headlamps are recessed in the upper portion of the front fenders. The combination parking and directional lamps also are recessed in the fender below the headlamps and, if fog lamps are desired, may be replaced with a triple function lamp assembly.

Vision Improved

Greater arc of vision and smoother exterior contours are derived from the curved windshield glass and narrowed front pillars. Chrome wipers were evolved to fit the curved glass.

Rear bumpers give greater protection; its high, broad, curved ends following the fender contour and setting into a recess in the fenders. Almost unlimited vision is offered by the greatly increased three division rear window area.

Cadillac interiors have been enhanced for 1948 and now include a completely enclosed instrument panel, increased window area, new upholstery fabrics and leather, wider seats, more leg room and innovations in the use of chrome and leather trim.

Push button window and front seat control is standard equipment on Series 60 Special, Series 75, and Convertibles. This feature is optional on all other models.

New Steering Jacket

A new steering column jacket completely conceals the steering and gear shift columns behind the instrument panel extension. New spacious bin type glove compartment is located in the center of panel, below the radio grille, for convenience to the driver or passengers.

Cadillac Hydra Matic drive again is available as optional equipment. With minor improvements and refinements, the Cadillac Hydra-Matic mechanism is the same tried and proven automatic transmission provided by General Motors in 1941. The reverse control mechanism has been improved to reduce gear clash when shifting into reverse. This improvement reduces the time required for engagement. The Cadillac 150 horsepower V-8 engine is contained in all models.

DELAWARE DAM FUNDS APPROVED

House Committee Acts; Dillon Dam Figures Slashed.

By The United Press

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24—The house appropriations committee today recommended expenditure of $1,494,000 for virtual completion next year of the Delaware reservoir flood control project in central Ohio.

The amount recommended for the Delaware reservoir, if approved by the house and senate will permit completion of 97 per cent of the $7,723,000 project during the fiscal year 1949. Only $435,000 for final land acquisition will be needed to complete the project if the recommendation is approved, Army engineers said.

The committee slashed $2,000,000 from a budget request of $3,000,000 for additional work on the Dillon dam project in Muskingum and Licking counties.

Rep. McGregor (R-Ohio), who opposes the Dillon dam, a flood control project, told a reporter he understood the $1,000,000 was for land acquisition and planning, with none for "new construction." He said he would not oppose the committee's recommendation.

Previously, McGregor appeared privately before an appropriations subcommittee to urge an "impartial" investigation of the project before any further funds are approved. He said the dam is unnecessary and that all contracts have been cancelled. McGregor told the subcommittee the government paid $158,000 for 610 acres of land which was appraised at $48,000.

GEN. MEYERS FACES 1ST CHARGE TODAY

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24—The government called Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers to trial today on the first of three criminal charges.

Meyers was the No. 2 purchasing agent for the Army Air Forces during the war.

He is accused in the present case of inducing a business associate to lie to senate investigators about his financial deals.

Bleriot H. Lamarre already has pleaded guilty to charges Meyers persuaded him to tell the senate war investigating committee a fake story last year. Lamarre later gave a different version and said it was the truth.

COUNCIL

dinance: Jenkins, Rhinehart, Biggert, Miller, Robinson, Cunningham, Penniston. Cheers greeted the announcement by Council President William G. Slack that the measure was lost.

Ordinance Held Over

The 100 persons remaining in the hall expecting more fireworks on the licensing bill for "pin-ball machines" and "juke boxes" were disappointed. The measure was given its second reading and upon the motion of Councilman Biggert of the Fourth Ward, seconded by Councilman Jenkins, it was moved that the ordinance be given its third reading at the next regular meeting, after being referred to the ways and means committee for revision.

Attorney Frank Wiedemann then asked council for an opportunity to discuss the ordinance with the ways and means committee. He advised council he represented Hopkins & Son, coin machine operators, while attorneys Fetter and Spohn, also in attendance, represented the Neidig and Runkel syndicates who also have a large number of juke boxes and pin ball machines in operation in this area. Wiedemann said that the operators are not opposed to a fair licensing law which will not tax the machines out of existence.

He was advised by President Slack to meet with Councilman Biggert, chairman of the ways and means committee, and arrange a meeting. Slack said that council knew there was much to be desired in the present form of the ordinance and that the committee would welcome the syndicate representatives suggestions for improving it. Councilman Biggert signified a willingness to meet with Mr. Wiedemann immediately but Wiedemann asked for time to prepare his suggestions. No date for the meeting between Wiedemann and the committee has been set to date.

Wants Smoke Abated

O. H. Heilman presented a petition containing 150 signatures of persons living in the section of the city near the Universal Cooler plant, in the vicinity of Oak street, asking council to approach the company with a proposition to abate the nuisance created by heavy clouds of smoke coming from the plant. He cited the case in which a similar action had been taken by council in cooperation with the Pollak Steel Co. in the past. He said that railroads through Marion were cooperating in smoke control. The matter was referred to the municipal service committee for investigation.

Only 10 persons remained in the room when Mayor Dowler addressed council on the status of the progress of the Marion City Airport project.

"The question has arisen," the mayor said, "as to whether the bond issue for the airport is sufficient to cover all the requirements of the financing of the completed project. Plans for the airport at present call for a runway 3,900 feet long. The overall cost of the project at present is estimated in excess of $690,000, of which half must come from the city. Our finances at present are sufficient to provide us with the field, its runway, taxi-ways and drainage. At present we would not be in a position to place hangers and an administration building on the field. No estimated costs for these buildings are on hand at present." The mayor reminded council that bids for construction of the first phase of the project will be received this Thursday. He asked council for a meeting where the matter could be informally discussed. Next Monday night was set by council for the meeting on the project with city officials. The meeting will begin at 7 p. m.

Before adjourning, council asked that all persons interested in the request of the local bus company to suspend service to the Lincoln Park Veterans' housing project be present at the next regular meeting of council Monday March 8 at 7:30 in the council chambers.

WALLACE

aid to Europe. Through his eight-point program, he said, "we would be relieved of the gnawing fear of war and atomic destruction which haunts us today."

Wallace set forth these points in outlining his project:

1. The creation of a $50,000,000,000 reconstruction fund.

2. A United Nations agency, "and not big business," should administer the fund.

3. All nations "with appropriate means" would contribute to it.

4. It would be parceled out on a priority basis to those nations that suffered most of the war, "including those of eastern Europe.

5. There should be no political strings attached to granting this assistance to any country. Wallace said, "it would permit the people of Europe to nationalize their industries—it would permit the exclusion of Wall Street trusts, the refusal to purchase surplus goods dumped abroad by big American business.

6. None of the money should be used to buy military supplies or armaments, nor could it be employed for war preparations. "My plan would eliminate the present American intervention in Greece, China, Indonesia, and Indochina which are increasingly threatening to become battlefronts of World War III," Wallace said.

7. The United Nations would establish a world food granary so that "the American farmer would be encouraged to produce to the limit, with a guaranteed price floor."

8. The Ruhr industrial complex would be placed under joint supervision of the United States, Russia, Britain and France. "its resources to be used to reconstruct Europe."

Would Align with Russia

The ousted Truman cabinet member noted that his program embraces the thought of cooperation between the United States and Soviet Russia. He asserted it would promote peace and friendly relations, and would eliminate "the policy of cold war and civil war today, and atomic war tomorrow."

At the same time he said he thinks Russia erred in withdrawing from the original conferences of nations on the Marshall plan.

Mr. McGrew summarized store stocks in relation to customer demand. He warned against too many items in window displays, and stressed the need of merchandise being plainly marked with clean price tags.

Mr. Ryan's Subject

John W. Ryan, merchandising manager of Frank Bros. spoke on the subject "Making People Want to Trade with You." "The average life of a retail store has been found by surveys to be 11 years," Mr. Ryan said. "Stores who have continued many years beyond this period have done a good job of merchandising."

"A survey of 1,500 stores indicated that 33 per cent of customers entering the store did not trade there after the first year. Another 30 per cent of the customers of a given store do not trade there after two to five years have passed. Customers who have dealt with a store over five years may be counted as satisfied and permanent customers."

"Friendliness is the most important thing in a store's relations with its customers. Most important in establishing friendliness with your customer is a friendly sincere smile and a pleasing tone of voice.

"Courtesy is the next item of importance in being friendly with your customer. Remembering your customer's name is pleasing, especially to women customers.

"Enthusiasm and a sound knowledge of your merchandise go hand in hand in making a successful sale of any item. Sell customers the proper item to fit their needs. If you do not have the item they want, tell them the truth. If it is on order, say so. When the item on order arrives, follow through and make the sale.

"If merchandise already sold is returned by the customer for some reason, make prompt and cheerful adjustments. Many merchants are so interested in getting new business that they chase ten old customers out of the store by failure to give satisfaction on merchandise already sold.

"Be alert, alive, and hide your feelings about a customer. If you are not feeling so well, keep it to yourself. Remember, a bright alert clerk with a cheerful personality will make the sales."

Harry Margwarth, merchandise manager for Schaffner's Furniture store, substituted on the program for John Schaffner, the scheduled speaker, who is ill. His subject was "Getting the Most from Advertising."

"Advertising is the main thing in merchandising," Margwarth said, "for without advertising to bring the customer to your store your other merchandising aids never get into action. The cost of advertising is heavy but it is the duty of your store sales personnel to lower this cost by making sales.

"County seats are important centers of their trading areas. Surveys throughout the country taken by electrical appliance manufacturers indicate that rural people like to come to the county seat to shop. Because of the psychological attraction of larger cities for country people the store in your small town is gradually losing ground because its customers are coming to the county seats and other larger cities to trade."

Cites Favorable Size

"Marion has a favorable size and position in its trading area. The local trading area is estimated at 55,000 homes over a seven county area. Marion is the logical trading center of this area."

"Realizing these facts Marion merchants are now advertising in small town newspapers over this entire area. If advertising by Marion merchants over this entire area is consistant, backed up by coordinated displays and knowledgeable sales people and cooperation between merchants in focusing their advertising on each locality in sufficient force, they boost Marion and make our town a better place to trade."

E. A. Tennant, division commercial superintendent of the Ohio Associated Telephone company, assisted by Joseph M. Lehan, traffic superintendent of the company presented the motion picture, "Telephone Courtesy" prior to the speakers program and at the close of the film conducted a question and answer session for the audience.

At the close of the speakers program Chairman Mason conducted a question and answer session between the audience and the speakers.

The institute is sponsored by the Board of Retail Managers of the Marion Chamber of Commerce and is under the direction of Miss Murl E. Frye, coordinator of distributive education at Harding High school.

opinion from reading about and talking about the case, Michel addressed the court.

He sought removal of any prospective juror if even a shade of opinion on the case is revealed in examination. He declared the defense would be additionally burdened if it were necessary to erase already formed opinions in the minds of members of the jury.

Small Attendance

The courtroom was not packed as the trial began its first day, in contrast to the recent Ray Shappard murder trial. Less than 50 persons sat through the repetitious questioning of jurors.

The opening session was orderly and marked only on infrequent occasions by objections of Prosecutor Reed and Mr. Michel to the manner in which various questions were posed. The prosecutor conducted the examination of jurors for the state. Special Prosecutor Russell Wilhelm was not present to assist with the examination.

Just what role superstition plays in sports can't quite be ascertained since no one ever saw superstition loop a basketball through the hoop for a field goal, or intercept a pass and run for a touchdown, or roll a golf ball into the cup for a hole-in-one, but the [illegible] are that it plays off somewhere in the wings, knocking props and misleading the [illegible] that count on it too heavily for support when the big [illegible] comes up . . . It's a two-faced [illegible] man at any rate. It may help a team rack up a string of victories but it can just as easily [illegible] . . . A team heading into the [illegible] of a victorious season [illegible] and then [illegible] back for the last win to come [illegible] maybe letting up a little to make room for the superstition to work . . . Comes the game and WHAM the awakening. The talisman failed to tally and [illegible] revealed as a no good bum . . .

MARION ST. MARY'S fine basketball team met up with superstition last week, but decided to ignore her . . . The Irish hadn't lost a game on the home boards this year, and had a crucial game coming up with Marysville, a game that could put them in a first place tie in the Mid-State league. It was a home game but because of the great interest in the game, it was suggested that it be played in a bigger, out-of-town field house . . . Should the Irish woo superstition and ignore the fans? Or should they put aside superstition and count on playing ability alone to win the game? . . . They chose the latter, and decided to hold the game on the Delaware High school boards . . . That game comes up Friday night—Marion St. Mary against Marysville for the championship of the Mid-State league . . .

After the decision was made and the sweat wiped off the brow, it was remembered that the St. Mary team of last year had likewise won all of their home games—but one . . . And that? Yep, Marysville . . . That set their minds at rest that they had turned the shoulder to superstition . . . And yet, just in case, the game will still be considered a home game, even if played in Delaware.

BROWNS GIVE UP RIGHTS TO CHAPPUIS

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, O., Feb 24—If the All-American conference can talk halfback Bob Chappuis out of signing with Pittsburgh of the National league, the Michigan star probably will tote the pigskin for one of the junior loop's weaker clubs.

Last night the Cleveland Browns, All-America conference champions, traded draft rights acquired for Chappuis in 1946 to another club for players to be named later.

The club acquiring the chance to sign the backfield ace of the Big Nine and Rose Bowl champions of 1947 was not named. However, Coach Paul Brown said the trade was made to "strengthen the overall league structure."

That, Brown said, earmarked Chappuis for the Baltimore Colts, Chicago Rockets or Brooklyn Dodgers — provided, of course, the halfback turns to the junior loop from the Pittsburgh Steelers. They have had four or five meetings with him and still hope to sign him.

Anyway, the Browns are well fortified at the T-quarterback spot where they probably would have had to use Chappuis. For this position they have Otto Graham, the conference's most valuable player, and Y. A. Tittle of Louisiana, one of the south's best passers in recent years.

BAROUDI'S MANAGER FACES SUSPENSION

Illinois Charges He Falsified Dead Boxer's Age.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Feb. 24 — Inquiries into the ring death of Sam Baroudi and events leading up to his fatal fight with Cincinnati's Ezzard Charles may bring suspension in Illinois to Mike Spinelli as a boxing manager.

The Illinois State Athletic commission has ordered Spinelli to appear March 8 to show cause why he should not be suspended in connection with the 20-year-old Akron, O., Negro's death last Saturday.

The commission said Baroudi's manager — a New York textile trucker — falsified the age of his fighter as 21. A fighter under 21 is ineligible to compete in bouts of more than six rounds under the Illinois code.

Baroudi was knocked out in the 10th and final round by Charles in their bout at the Chicago stadium Friday night. He died six hours later of cerebral hemmorrhage.

The commission also intends to question Spinelli on his "conduct" following the fight. The youngster's manager was found at municipal airport attempting to catch a plane for New York with his fighter's share of the purse three hours after the bout. Baroudi at that time was in a hospital.

DONS REPORTED WILLING TO PAY CRISLER $50,000

By The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES, Feb 2—The Los Angeles Dons would like to have Fritz Crisler, University of Michigan coach, and are willing to let him "write his own ticket."

A spokesman for the All-America Conference club indicated that the Dons were willing to pay Crisler more than $50,000 a year, but General Manager Harry Thayer declined to set a figure.

"If Crisler is willing to enter the pro ranks he can't afford to turn down what we are ready to offer him," Thayer said.

Toledo Joins Xavier, Bowling Green As 20-Game Winner; Defeats Dayton

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Feb 24—Toledo joined Xavier and Bowling Green in the select list of 20-game college basketball winners last night.

Coach Jerry Bush's Rockets had a rough time, however, before coming out of Dayton with a 45-35 win.

It was Toledo's 20th victory against four defeats. Xavier has a similar record. Bowling Green is the "winningest" squad in the state—25 triumphs in 30 games. No other Ohio quintet has a chance to manufacture 20 wins at this time.

Dayton, winner only eight times in 20 starts, stayed with the Rockets until the final 10 minutes. When Toledo unleashed a fast break, broke a 28-all tie and won going away.

Elsewhere last night, Ohio State's late-finishing Buckeyes turned the tables on Indiana, 60-45, Brownie Cellar's free throw in the last 30 seconds gave Capital a 66-65 win over Kenyon; St. Francis of Pennsylvania blasted Steubenville, 81-55, with a devastating last half drive, and Beckley of West Virginia led all the way in downing Rio Grande, 85-58.

Ohio State lost at Indiana earlier this season, 71-54. Last night's game was close until the final minutes, when the Buckeyes dropped them in from all angles. It was OSU's fourth straight home victory in Big Nine games.

Forward Dick Schnittker, the all-time Ohio State scoring champ, collected 26 points. The Buckeyes led most of the way and 26-23 at halftime.

Cellar was fouled with the Capital-Kenyon score tied at 65-all. He had two free throws and sank the first. Then Capital (won 13—lost 3) took the ball out of bounds and stalled the rest of the way. The loss was Kenyon's ninth in 18 games. Eppa Rixey, with 24 points for Kenyon, took scoring honors.

St. Francis held a slim, 28-27 halftime edge in the Steubenville game, then ran away with the contest in the final 20 minutes.

HONUS WAGNER STILL GOING STRONG AT 74

By The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH, Feb 24—Honus Wagner, the man who couldn't quit baseball, celebrated his 74th birthday today by carving an 18-pound turkey and preparing for his 37th year in the National league.

Restless at 58, after a 15-year layoff from the diamond, he returned to the Pirates that year to ask for any job that would keep him in his beloved game. He was promptly assigned as coach.

"If it's left to me, I will be in baseball till the day I die," he declared today. "Baseball is all I ever knew."

CARDINGTON SHADES EDISON QUINT, 64-63

Marengo, Johnsville Win Other Morrow Tourney Games.

Special to The Star

IBERIA, Feb. 24 — Morrow county basketball fans witnessed one of the most thrilling games of tournament history as Cardington and Edison battled here Saturday night. Cardington won, 64-63.

Edison's Maynard Goare with 23 points bested the Pirates' Bill Maxwell's 22 points in a brilliant scoring duel.

In the final two minutes with the score, 64-59, the Edison Tigers missed several attempts but Cris Shipman and Harold Jackson both scored to make the final count 64-63 and the Pirates managed to stall in the final seconds of play for the victory.

A confident Marengo quintet pushed Iberia cagers aside at Edison Saturday night to enter Morrow tourney finals with a powerful Cardington team Friday night at Iberia, Morrow county's basketball capital.

The brilliant play of Hugh Pu[illegible]tick and all-county guard Bob Snaget upset the Presidents in the last period as they contributed heavily to the 45-25 score.

Johnsville's Raiders came back in the consolation bracket to knock out Sparta, 44-32, after leading all the way. The Johnnies meet Chesterville Tuesday night at Iberia.

RICHARDS UNDERDOG IN BOUT WITH GODOY

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Feb 24—Arturo Godoy will carry a 14-pound weight advantage into tonight's 10-round heavyweight fight with "Irish Pat" Richards.

However, the South American champion, will give away 11 years to the 24-year-old Ohio State pre-med student, winner of 22 of 24 bouts, 17 by knockouts.

Richards will be the underdog as he pits youth and punch against the experience of the man who went 15 rounds against Joe Louis in 1940. Godoy lost to Louis then on a split decision. The next time out, the champ kayoed him in eight rounds.

Godoy weighed in yesterday at 202 pounds, Richards at 188.

Promoter Al Haft said a sell-out crowd of 3,200 would pay an estimated $15,000 to see the show.

In making the announcement today, Les O'Connor, Sox general manager, said no cash was involved.

"Robinson may be the long-ball hitter we've been needing for a long time," said O'Connor.

TRIBE TO OPEN TRAINING WITH 8 OUTFIELDERS

By International News Service

CLEVELAND, O., Feb 24 — The Cleveland Indians may not have the best assortment of outfielders in the league, but they probably will have the most when spring training begins at Tucson, Ariz., next Monday.

Bill Veeck, who made many fruitless attempts to obtain Stan Spence or Hoot Evers to strengthen the Tribe's outfield post, said yesterday that he has provided Manager Lou Boudreau with eight, and possibly nine fly chasers.

Those battling for a first-place berth are Dale Mitchell, Hank Edwards, Hal Peck, Pat Seerey and Larry Doby — all holdovers from last year. Wally Judnich, a former St. Louis Brown, Allie Clark, a former Yankee, and Thurman Tucker, who was brought to the Redskins from the Chicago White Sox, round out the list.

The ninth man may be Hank Greenberg, former Pittsburgh and Detroit slugger, who intends to work out with the Tribe at Tucson before deciding whether to accept an Indian contract as player-coach.

The former official of Scattergood & Son, Mansfield, O., left an estate estimated at $115,381.68, the papers showed. Beneficiaries were his widow, Roberta L., to receive a third of the estate, a son, two ninths, and a daughter, four ninths.

Welles Resignation And Reasons Told In Detail by Hull

By CORDELL HULL

(Copyright, 1948, by North American Newspaper Alliance)

INSTALLMENT XXVI

B[illegible] President Roosevelt left for Quebec in August, 1943, he requested Sumner Welles to resign as under secretary of state. [illegible] Welles to his office at the White House and made this [illegible] him.

During the previous few weeks the President and I had talked more than once about the problem of Welles. We were in agreement that Welles should resign, be given a special appointment outside the country and assume the new duties involved.

[illegible] of the problems presented by Under Secretary Welles, [illegible] will not enumerate at length since no purpose would be served by so doing, had been growing for two to three years. The Rio de Janeiro conference in January, 1942, had demonstrated a [illegible] of his which was not [illegible]—his readiness to make [illegible] decisions from time to time without consulting me.

[illegible] our earliest association I [illegible] to give him a reasonable latitude in carrying on his work. I had asked him to go directly to the President, especially when I was closely engaged at the department, to take up with Mr. Roosevelt matters on which Welles was working. This was in line with my policy that my immediate associates, the under secretary, the counselor and the assistant secretaries, should see the President themselves on specified matters and with my knowledge. I felt that this occasional contact would give them more experience, greater prestige and keener interest in their work, and also relieve me of some of the innumerable burdens thrust upon a secretary of state, especially in the difficult times through which we were passing.

I FOUND, HOWEVER, that Welles abused this privilege by going to the President on occasion without my knowledge, and even attempting to secure a decision, again without my knowledge. There was perhaps some explanation for this tendency in the fact that Mr. Roosevelt and Welles were old family friends with the same social and school background.

During the period leading up to the outbreak of the war in Europe, when my duties in the department were piling higher and higher each month, I authorized Welles to see many or most of the ambassadors and ministers desiring to call at the department, especially in connection with routine matters and those of lesser importance. Naturally I would, in any event, see all foreign representatives desiring to see me, and also would keep in contact with them on matters of major importance. Also, Welles was expected to bring or send foreign representatives to me in connection with important questions.

SUMNER WELLES

Resigned but declined special mission assignment.

This last I soon discovered he was not doing in a number of instances, notwithstanding that I had made clear that I must insist on seeing representatives on such occasions, no matter how busy I was. Later, when an important ambassador came to see me at my invitation and I asked him to come back again and resume our discussion, he immediately threw up his hands and said I would have to speak first with Mr. Welles. The foregoing practices gradually but steadily became more aggravated.

I BEGAN TO NOTE that Welles was carrying on personal correspondence with our diplomats and with officials of other governments which should have been carried on through the official channels of the state department. He was sending personal notes to them and inviting personal responses from them on matters calling for department notes handled in the regular way. The adverse effect of this was that he was gathering into his own hands items of negotiation or discussion that should have been of more general knowledge to me and to the officers of the department directly concerned.

In the late spring of 1942 Welles delivered two addresses on foreign affairs that tended to commit this government to new lines of foreign policy. The more important was on Memorial day at Arlington cemetery, during the visit of Foreign Commissar Molotov, and dealt with our postwar plans. On neither occasion did Welles consult with me in advance as to these new pronouncements.

I called Welles to my office on June 20, 1942, and pointed out to him that no under secretary or assistant secretary had ever had the function of giving out new foreign policy to any extent, and this function did not in any sense exist now. Any attempt to have two leaders in the person of the secretary and the under secretary working coordinately or to have the under secretary assume this role alone, I said, created a situation that I could not acquiesce in for a moment.

I added that, under the well-defined rules of the state department, no under secretary or assistant secretary should go direct to the President on any official matters except at the President's direction or with the knowledge and authority of the secretary, and no one knew this better than Welles himself. I said that the unprecedented privilege I had given him of access to the White House might have been a mistake on my part, for it was a privilege that none of his predecessors, to my knowledge, had had.

WELLES REPLIED that he was not aware that he had been defining new foreign policy in his speeches. He then said that, in view of what I had said, he would cease making speeches altogether.

I responded that he made splendid speeches and that I would like to see him make even a hundred speeches in support of the war; this single question of omitting new foreign policy from his speeches unless we had agreed upon it was the sole thing I had in mind.

To my surprise, Welles continued to the end of our conversation to confuse the two entirely different classes of speeches, and to insist that he would not make any more speeches at all. To my further surprise, he said that in a conversation he had with the President the latter had remarked that he himself did not expect to make any speech on postwar problems, but that it would be all right for other members of the government to do so as trial balloons.

I replied that Welles had not told me about this talk he had had with the President, nor was this in harmony with his first contention that he was not conscious of having referred to new foreign policy.

Our conversation had the effect of clearing the air for the time being. Subsequently Welles did make speeches on foreign affairs, but he consulted with me first. Nevertheless, he did not cease his practice of going to the President over my head. I could not repose the same confidence in him that I did in my other associates.

I FELT THAT, notwithstanding Welles's education and training in foreign affairs, he was narrower and less sound than my other associates on quite a number of major questions and policies. Before the war in Europe came we differed on armed intervention in Cuba and on our evaluation of the results of the Munich conference. After war came, we differed on the Western Hemisphere neutrality zone and on the proposed ultimatum to Japan to which Roosevelt and Churchill agreed at the Atlantic conference and in the formulation of which Welles had been an adviser. I felt this matter would have brought on war with the Japanese at that time, when we were less prepared than at the time of Pearl Harbor. After Pearl Harbor we differed on the handling of Argentina at the Rio conference, on the nature of his speeches, and on the structure of the postwar international security organization.

These divergences were due at times to a difference of philosophy and at others to differences over the more practical and effective means of handling crucial questions and issues, to say nothing of Welles's frequent unwillingness to do teamwork with me. This situation was particularly acute during the later period of his service, and was handicapping to those of us who were working together as a unit.

For some years I had looked to Welles to supervise the administration of the state department in the most efficient manner possible. This was the normal function of an under secretary of state, thus permitting the secretary of state to devote more time to the formulation of policy. Welles, however, seemed to become engrossed with other matters, with the result that most of us in the department in position to judge were keenly disappointed by the result of his administrative services. After Stettinius became under secretary I encharged him with a complete administrative reorganization of the department.

THE PRESIDENT HIMSELF had begun to appreciate the extent of Welles's disloyalty to me. He complained particularly and more than once about Welles's delivering the Arlington Cemetery speech without consulting either of us, and he said to me that he later remonstrated with Welles about the speech. He informed me on one occasion that Welles had come to him with a suggestion that he, Welles, be sent on a given mission, the nature of which the President did not mention. Mr. Roosevelt was sharply critical of the fact that Welles had not consulted me before making the suggestion.

I could have resolved the Welles problem by going to the President and insisting that he choose between Welles and me. But I had been accustomed to work with people, not against them. The work of the state department was now colossal, Welles was a hard worker, and it was preferable to utilize his services, if they could be had on a loyal basis, than to dispense with them.

In early summer, 1943, however, the President himself realized that the situation in the state department could not continue. He decided on his own that, in the light of all existing circumstances, numbers of which need not be mentioned, the efficiency of the department would be better served by Welles's retirement. He and I agreed that Welles's resignation should be rendered easier for him by the President's offering to send him as roving ambassador to South America or to Russia on a special mission.

THE PRESIDENT MADE this proposal to Welles when he requested his resignation, pointing out to him that he could thus leave the state department without undue sensation.

Without giving the President a definite reply to this proposal, Welles came to my office immediately after his talk with Mr. Roosevelt. He indicated his belief that the President had acted at my instance. I gave him the full facts, including the one that the President had acted on his own deliberate judgment, after full investigation of the situation, regardless of whether he had acted as a result of any suggestion from me.

I then urged upon him the President's suggestion of a special mission, with particular reference to a conference at Moscow. Welles, in a tone of finality, pomptly said that nothing could be gotten out of that sort of trip. He soon got up, came over to my desk, shook hands and then departed. I have not talked to him since.

I left shortly thereafter for the Quebec conference. Welles went to Maine. Instead of accepting the President's suggestion of a special mission, he wrote out his resignation and mailed it to the White House.

HEALTH PLAN SET UP FOR QUAKER WORKERS

Sick and Accident Benefits for Hourly Employes.

The Quaker Oats Co. today notified its Marion employes that a sickness and accident plan for hourly workers will be established March 1.

Commenting on the descriptive booklet given 65 hourly paid employes who will be eligible to receive these benefits, Plant Superintendent L. L. Kreuter pointed out that the new plan will provide them a substantial part of their regular pay when they are absent from work due to personal illness or accident.

Quaker, Mr. Kreuter said, will pay all costs of the sickness and accident plan. He expressed the belief that it will measure up well with such other Quaker benefits as profit-sharing, which for 12 years has given hourly paid employes an average of a month's extra pay.

Employes were told that the new plan, which will cost them nothing, is being established on a trial basis. Mr. Kreuter said its continuance will depend upon Quaker's ability to pay the costs out of earnings, and upon the cooperation of employes in making sure that only just illness or accident claims are made.

Future Retailers Find Most Merchants Sweep Sidewalks

A report for the past week in the city clean-up campaign sponsored by the Future Retailers club of Marion shows there are now only a few merchants who do not sweep the sidewalks in front of their places of business each morning, according to an announcement made by Frank E. Hall, who is serving as general chairman of the campaign.

However, of the large number who do sweep the sidewalks, only a small percentage sweep the dirt into containers instead of into the street, Chairman Hall reported.

Lists are being kept of the merchants who comply with the objectives of the campaign and certificates will be awarded in the near future to those who continue to carry out the objectives which have been set up.

The main objectives of the campaign are for the merchants to sweep their sidewalks each morning, put the sweepings into containers instead of into the street, and for the citizens to use refuse containers which have been provided in the downtown area.

Records are also being kept of merchants who are not cooperating, and at a later date, these merchants will again be contacted by members of the club in regard to the campaign.

At the present time, the campaign is centering on the merchants. Within the next week, posters directed toward the public will be put up at various places in town.

The committee for last week which patroled the streets was composed of Paul Myers, Bill Sontag, Tom Goetting and Dick Wedertz. Serving on the committee this week are Delores Miller, Doris Porter, Don Showalter and Ray Swerline.

TAYLOR JOINS WITH WALLACE

Senator, Now No. 2 Man on 3rd Ticket, Says Democratic Party "Left Him."

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24—Senator Glen Taylor of Idaho has kissed the Democratic party goodbye to become No. 2 man on the Henry A. Wallace ticket.

"I am not leaving the Democratic party, it left me," Taylor told a radio audience last night. "Wall Street and the military have taken over."

All the major parties offer, he said, is a choice between "a Republican tweedle dum and a Democratic tweedle dummer."

Taylor said as far as he is concerned that leaves the third party as the place to fight for "the principles in which I believe."

"I'm in this to win," the 43-year-old Idahoan told reporters at a news conference after his speech. "I have confidence and faith. I think I'll get to be vice president."

The one-time "crooning cowboy" said he agrees with Wallace that "you've got to believe we can work with Russia—or give up hope and prepare for the end of the world.

"I believe Russia wants peace. She has plenty of territory and material. She doesn't want markets."

If Russia seems to be "trying to spread out," he said, it is because of "fear of the rest of the world."

Wallace, the senator declared, "is the only leader we can put forward who has the confidence of peoples everywhere."

Taylor had harsh words for the Democratic organization. Leaving it, he said, will make him "feel good inside."

"I can come out swinging for the things in which I believe," he said, "without fear of stepping on the prejudices or privileges of some unsavory associate . . . no Pauleys, no oil, no Wall Street, no generals, no privileged few."

In his home state of Idaho the Democrats had harsh words for Taylor. The senator helped George Donart, Weiser attorney, win the 1946 Democratic nomination for the senate. Last night Donart said:

"I wish him lots of luck—all of it bad."

Reporters who asked Taylor to comment on talk that U. S. Communists have swarmed to the third party got this reply:

"I'm glad to have their vote. I'd be glad to have the votes of bank robbers if I can get elected to do what I think is right."

In his prepared address, Taylor said his goal is to make the American way of life so attractive that "Communism will never interest more than the infinitesimal fraction of our citizens who adhere to it now."

MARION MAN HURT IN RAILROAD ACCIDENT

C. R. Sosey's Arm Amputated After Switching Mishap.

An amputation operation was necessitated following an accident Sunday night in which Charles R. Sosey, Marion railroad man, was injured at Mansfield, his right arm having been nearly severed when he fell under railroad cars switching there.

The arm was amputated between the elbow and shoulder at Mansfield General hospital where he remains under medical care. He suffered injury of his right foot also. The accident happened about 10:45.

A freight conductor for the Erie railroad, his run is between Marion and Kent. It was on a return trip to Marion that the accident happened. Mr. Sosey was evidently jerked from the top of a car while attempting to set a brake, another Marion railroad man said today.

He has had more than 27 years of service on the railroad, is a member of B. of R. T., and a member of the local grievance committee. His home is at 1115 East Church street. A report from the hospital last night listed his condition as "as good as can be expected."

New York Stock Quotations

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Feb. 24—Stocks edged forward on a selective basis today although many market leaders stumbled.

Slowdowns eventuated after a fairly active start. While gains of fractions to a point or so persisted near midday, losses of as much were plentiful.

Some professional bidding was ascribed to the idea an upward technical-correction still was a possibility.

Atlantic Gulf & West Indies touched a new 1947-48 peak. Supported were Twentieth Century-Fox, Thomas Steel (on a raised dividend), N. Y. Central, Woolworth, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Phelps Dodge, Texas Co. and Mission Corp.

BABY DIES

The frame house was covered with tarpaper. It measured about 12 feet by 12, and was not more than seven feet high.

Fire gutted the interior and melted some of the tarpaper on the outside. Damage was estimated at $1,750. A nearly full can of kerosene was found inside the house unharmed.

The baby's crib was not more than four feet from the stove. It was charred badly.

A dog, a pet of the family, lay dead nearby. It was not burned.

The dead baby, said by Fire Chief Sifritt to be the first fatality by fire within the corporation limits of Marion for a number of years, was taken to the Gunder funeral home. Arrangements for the funeral have not been completed.

Mrs. Wagner was taken to the home of friends, Mr. and Mrs. Welden Kerr of North Main street. The Lima Tubercular hospital was notified of the tragedy.

The death was the fifth caused by kerosene in Marion county within three months.

The child was born Nov. 9, 1945, in Columbus, a son of Cyrus E. and Myrtle Joan Stillwell Wagner, the father a native of McCutchenville and the mother of Kentucky.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY

By AP Newsfeatures

ADM. CHESTER W. NIMITZ, born Feb. 24, 1885, retired last year as chief of U.S. naval operations. World War II Pacific commander, he planned the naval strategy and cooperated with Gen. Douglas MacArthur in amphibious operations. His signature stands on the Japanese surrender document. Texas born, Annapolis educated, he had many early commands with the submarine fleet. He became rear admiral in 1938, full admiral in 1941, and admiral of the fleet in 1944.

One Man's Opinion

By WALTER KIERNAN

Eire's Prime Minister Costello plans to eliminate four nuisance taxes—boats leaving New York every hour.

We're still paying a World War I tax on movie admissions ....In fact the sign in one box office read "when you pay your movie tax you're helping Gen. Pershing."

* * *

You'd think by now they'd be up to Gen. Myers.

* * *

It isn't that we mind paying legitimate taxes but 1948 is rather late to be paying for 1918 spam.

* * *

Anyway Eire's Costello says his nation's foreign policy will remain unchanged .... That's what Downing street was afraid of.

* * *

Incidentally, Argentina, Chile and Britain each claim a piece of Antarctica known as "O'Higins Land" .... Wait 'til Costello hears about that.
